

Pretty Twisted

CELEB STYLIST
STACEY CICERON
WHIPS UP FOUR
GORGEOUS LOOKS
BY NYKIA SPRADLEY
PHOTOGRAPHY
BY TAKAHIRO OGAWA

DOUBLE UP

“Adding a roll to a style takes it from basic to boss,” says Baldwin, New York, hair-stylist Stacey Ciceron. A combination of sleekness and structure takes these pigtail puffs into grown-up territory. Ciceron parted the hair from just above the middle of the right eyebrow to the left corner of the back of the head. She used a bit of edge control around the perimeter of each ponytail section to tame flyaways and to enhance the slickness. After securing each pony with an elastic band, she back-combed the loose hair to give each roll a little extra cushioning (you can skip this step if you desire less volume). She smoothed the top layer of the back-combed hair with a brush and hair spray. Wrapping the hair around her fingers like a pin curl, she secured it with bobby pins onto the base of the ponytail and spritzed with a touch more hair spray to keep the roll in place.

HAIR

HAIR: STACEY CICERON/VENBARBOZA.COM; MAKEUP: MONIFA MORTIS; MANICURE: MISS POP; FASHION EDITOR: JOIEE THORPE.

THE NEXT WAVE

Highlights undeniably add dimension to beach waves. After a rough blow-dry, Ciceron took one-inch panels of hair, spritzed them with hair spray and a thermal protectant, and wrapped each panel around a $\frac{3}{4}$ -inch-barrel curling iron. For more volume and to achieve a natural wave, alternate the direction that each section is curled. "One important thing to keep in mind when wrapping the hair around the iron is to leave the ends out," says Ciceron. "Stop when there's about one to two inches left." Once the curls are complete, gather the hair from the bangs and roll it away from the face.

Secure with bobby pins. ▷

ROLL WITH IT

Work in sections to get the best results with this style. Ciceron parted the hair into four horizontal segments to form ponytails. With a few dabs of edge control and a brush, she smoothed the sides to eliminate visible parts. Starting at the forehead, the stylist rolled and tucked the hair from each section into the next creating the illusion of one continuous roll. She secured with bobby pins as she twisted, leaving the last ponytail (at the nape) loose. ▷

TEXTURED TWIST

"Every woman needs to have this look in her arsenal, whether it's for a hot, humid day, a workout, a girls' night out or the red carpet," says Ciceron. It's suitable for any texture and most hair lengths. Begin with a side part. The deeper the part, the more dramatic the outcome. Smooth down any flyaways at the hairline. French-braid strands loosely from the start of the right eyebrow around to the far left bottom corner of the head. Use a tiny elastic band to keep the end of the braid from unraveling. Tuck the length of the braid under the top braid, and secure with bobby pins. Pull the folds apart slightly to up the visual interest. □

"Healthy hair is always in style." That has long been the mantra for Stacey Ciceron (@staceyciceron). Having crafted exquisite dos for such famous faces as Oscar winner Lupita Nyong'o and Victoria's Secret models Chanel Iman and Joan Smalls, Ciceron continues to be a leader in creative styling.